

PRACTICE LIKE YOU PLAY

by Rich Marik
National Director of Instruction, NIKE Golf Schools & Jr. Camps
PGA Professional
Former Team Captain, Stanford University Golf Team
Former U.S. Junior Amateur Champion
Director, NIKE Junior Golf Camps in Monterey/Pebble Beach

It is extremely important to practice your short game. The shots around and on the green make up about 60% of your total shots on the golf course. So, if you want to lower your scores, work on your short game and you will see your scores drop!

One of the keys in practicing your short game is to practice like you play. Try different shots from around the green and go through the same routine you would use on the course.

Scatter many golf balls out onto the practice area to create many different shots. Then go through the following routine every time you hit a shot.

1 Observe the lie you have.

How the ball is sitting in the grass will influence the type of shot you will play. If the ball is sitting down in the grass you will need to play a higher shot using a club with more loft and if the ball is sitting on top of the grass you can hit a lower shot using a club with less loft.